Dear Jane, Mark, and Justin,

It was great to see (or hear) you again on Friday!

Attached are the slides for the risk assessment workshop we discussed. The ones used in China and Taiwan are in simplified and traditional Chinese, respectively. Therefore, I must apologize that these do not have the changes that resulted from our experiences in Nanjing, Beijing, and Taipei. There are a number of upgrades we want to make in the English version, but have not had the chance to do so. Sorry about that.

I may not have mentioned this: the data used in this case is from a randomly chosen data-rich substance. I must acknowledge and thank my former colleague Adam Lee of DuPont for his efforts to mine the public data and for doing the modeling work and generating the modeled data. The modeled exposure numbers were generated by Debbie Lander, our exposure and risk assessor, who deserves a great deal of credit for developing the workshop material. Unfortunately, we did not have access to monitoring data.

As you can see, slides 1-38 lay the foundation, slides 39-41 describes the exercise, and slides after 42 shows different assessments for different time and budget constrained scenarios for the debrief session. We typically have at least one team with $5 million USD budget and 60 months and one with $500,000 budget and 36 months (or some variation). It makes for interesting decisions and discussions of risk, uncertainty, and management measures during debrief.

I very much look forward to your thoughts and would really appreciate any suggestions.

Wishing you a wonderful holiday season!

Andy
